

References: Required References, bibliographies, or works cited provide detailed information on the published material (books, journal articles, websites, tables, images, datasets, etc.) cited within your manuscript. Your References should be a separate chapter after the body of your thesis and before your appendices.

References

Use the same university approved font and size as your body text. For headings, use a size not larger than 20-points.

Your reference style is specified by your discipline. Usually, it is APA, Chicago, MLA, etc. This is an example of APA style. Whichever style you use, be consistent throughout your thesis and use the newest edition of your discipline's guidelines.
