Historical Summary

The Arkansas Baptist State Convention was founded on 21 September 1848 at Brownsville Church in Tulip (Dallas County), Arkansas. The convention was established as an affiliate of the Southern Baptist Convention and had played a significant role in Baptist community life in Arkansas.

The first president of the ABSC was Isaac Perkins and the first secretary was Samuel Stevenson. James P. Eagle, who later become governor of Arkansas and president of the Southern Baptist Convention, presided over the Arkansas convention for 21 years.

The ABSC's history is marked by its efforts to collect funds for missions and education. The ABSC has been instrumental in the development of Baptist churches and associations in Arkansas, providing unity and coordination among them. Many of the photographs in this series were collected by the ABSC for its centennial publication by James Sterling Rogers, A History of Arkansas Baptists (1948).

For additional information on the history of the ABSC see: "Arkansas Baptist State Convention," at <https://encyclopediaofarkansas.net>.

Scope and Contents and Arrangement

Approximately 600 photographs [original and copy], many of Arkansas Baptist ministers, collected by the ABSC for the 1948 publication, History of Arkansas Baptist: Convention

Centennial by James Sterling Rogers. Also includes photographs of groups and places, most with some Baptist affiliation. Photographs are divided into two series: (1) People and (2) Places and Groups, although there is some overlap between the two series, for instances with the copy photographs from Pastor WLA Stranburg.
