Biographical/Historical

The Arkansas Technical Assistance and Consultative Center (ATAC) was created in 1969 and was funded by the U.S. Department of Education as a way to offer aid and support to schools across the state with the process of school integration. This assistance was to help personnel understand Title IV law, provide staff professional development, and to deal with race relations as schools began the process of desegregating. ATAC staff held workshops and conducted presentations at schools across Arkansas and Louisiana.

ATAC's headquarters were at Ouachita Baptist University with Dr. A.B. Wetherington serving as Director and Dr. James Ford as Assistant Director.
